AUTO SHOW FEATURE OF ROCKEFELLER FAIR

Candidates for Office Also Add to Interest of the Annual Exhibition.

WASHINGTON COLT IS ONLY FAST ONE IN STAKE RACE

Another District Horse Loses Six-Furlong Dash—Principal Events in Tomorrow's Program.

Special Dispatch to The Star. ROCKFELLER, Md., August 24.—Although the attendance at the fair the first two days was below what was expected, due to the extreme heat, it is thought, the crowd today more than made amends and was sufficiently large to make certain the financial success of the four-day exhibition.

The weather conditions today could hardly have been improved upon, the temperature at no time being too warm for comfort. The showers of yesterday afternoon and evening settled the dust, thus removing one of the greatest of discomforts with which visitors to the fair so frequently have to contend.

Politics in Attendance. The politicians attended the fair today. Upon special invitation of the fair officials Representative David J. Lewis, democratic candidate for the United States Senate, to succeed Senator Blair Lee, and his republican opponent, Dr. Joseph I. France, and H. Dorsey Enoch, republican candidate for Congress in this district, spent the day on the grounds. Accompanied by prominent political leaders, they shook hands with many of the voters and pulled off the usual electioneering stunts with the women and children.

The stake race yesterday afternoon for two-year-olds owned in Maryland, the District of Columbia, Virginia and West Virginia was a disappointment. It had been looked forward to with interest by the spectators, but the only colt to show any speed was Macdoo, owned by D. J. McCarthy of Washington.

The other two harness events—the 23rd trot and the 21st pace—were also won by the Marylanders. The 23rd trot was won by the Marylander, owned by Javins Brothers of Silver Spring, Md., winning the trot, and Poney Boy, owned by the same party, won the pace. The 21st pace was won by the Marylander, owned by Javins Brothers, Va., taking the pace.

High Elmer Takes Six-Furlong Dash.

The six-furlong dash was won by the Frederick sprinter, High Elmer, owned by Leitch Brothers. Tony Ononesome, belonging to Nat Myers of Maryland, was an easy second, beating the only other starter, Maccabee, the property of J. C. Dow of Washington, by several lengths. The time was 1:22.

The automobile driving contest will also take place in the morning. Cash prizes will be awarded for the best decorated cars, and a large number of machines from this county, the District of Columbia and elsewhere will be in line.

GERMAN LINER WILLEHAD QUITS BOSTON HARBOR

Had Taken Refuge There on Outbreak of War—Bound for New London, Conn.

BOSTON, August 24.—The North German Lloyd liner Willehad, which has been in refuge here since the outbreak of the war, slipped out of the harbor early today, presumably for New London, Conn., for which port she obtained clearance papers last night.

NAVAL MILITIA GROWS.

Strength Increased 20 Per Cent During Past Fiscal Year.

The strength of the organized naval militia increased approximately 20 per cent during the last fiscal year, the Navy Department announced today, the force now totaling 9,500 men and 700 officers.

Realism in the Movies.

By Frederic J. Haskin.

NEW YORK, August 24.—A young girl stood gazing in horrified silence across a wide expanse of lake, where a rowboat lay pitching around on the surface, its sole occupant a sleeping infant. The next instant she plunged into the water and struck out for the boat, which was drifting farther away every second. Suddenly her strength gave out and she sank, to rise, struggle and sink again. The third time she went down a man on the opposite bank, who had been steadily turning the handle of a moving picture camera, tore off his coat and dived in, bringing the girl to the surface just in time.

Realism the One Element Essential. "Props" in their back yards with which they can construct anything from a barnyard to a desert island, but in most instances natural scenery is the background. The real thing must be filmed. One leading man last year got a little too much of the real thing in a picture staged on Niagara. The scenario called for one scene in which the villain picks up the hero and throws him bodily over a wall, presumably into the rapids, but actually on a narrow incline between the rapids and the water. The villain, who was chosen for his gigantic size, and he was so anxious to demonstrate his strength that he forgot to catch hold of a rock and cling to it until all reached him, during which he fell into the rapids, recorded some very interesting realism.

Another actor also suffered from too much of the real thing not long ago in making the picture, but their applause and admiration are sufficient to spur the player on to even greater adventures.

Huge Money Order Business.

The domestic money order system of the Post Office Department, which went into operation November 1, 1884, issued orders aggregating $654,139,134 last year. International money orders, first issued October 12, 1887, aggregated $66,772,073 last year, a decrease of $41,000,000 from 1914, the falling off being due to the European war.

Movie Star's Life a Perpetual Risk.

The life of a movie star these days is a perpetual risk. In order to achieve any great popularity a picture must have at least two good sized thrills, and it is up to the actor to lend himself amply to walking off precipices or sliding over falls, if he would win prestige with the fans. A man who asks for a substitute every time there is a risk, moreover, does not acquire merit with his directors. Substitutes usually are expensive, and the director must keep the cost of his pictures down. Then, too, the moving picture audience is getting to be expert in the detection of deception or fakery, which makes the use of substitutes and dummies precarious.

It must be said to the credit of the moving picture companies that the risks always are made as safe as possible. Mattresses are provided for people to fall on when jumping out of a window in the fourth story; boats are sent out to pick up the players who cast themselves into the water in a scene, and a squad of police accompanies the company when it enters the Chinese section to take scenes. The Chinese have many weird superstitions regarding the camera, which is supposed to set loose a whole gang of evil spirits, and the rule of the Chinese is that the director must not look at the camera when he is making a picture. One director and the property man of a picture company in New York when they attempted to take a scene of a man jumping out of a window, the director was determined to get the scene he wanted. He ordered the camera man to proceed. Instantly a mob of Chinese surrounded the players, and it took a large squad of policemen to escort them safely out of the zone.

In the majority of cases the really bad accidents that occur are due to the recklessness of the players themselves. If an actor is seriously hurt so that he cannot work, the picture is not only lost, but the picture, which is a great annoyance, consequently, every precaution is taken to see that the actor is not hurt. A young actress playing the lead in a thrilling serial recently was required by the script to jump out of a third-story window and lower herself by a rope to a lower window in the next.

In this particular play the heroine house. Seen in the picture it appears to be a remarkable and dangerous feat, but as a matter of fact it was simple and safe. A heavy metal belt was placed around her waist beneath her skirt, and to this the rope was attached, which made it impossible for her to fall. When the time came to take the scene the director thought that the belt was not quite strong enough, and the work was delayed until the property man could have it strengthened.

The necessary element in moving pictures today is realism. Many large companies still maintain in their back yards with which they can construct anything from a barnyard to a desert island, but in most instances natural scenery is the background. The real thing must be filmed. One leading man last year got a little too much of the real thing in a picture staged on Niagara. The scenario called for one scene in which the villain picks up the hero and throws him bodily over a wall, presumably into the rapids, but actually on a narrow incline between the rapids and the water. The villain, who was chosen for his gigantic size, and he was so anxious to demonstrate his strength that he forgot to catch hold of a rock and cling to it until all reached him, during which he fell into the rapids, recorded some very interesting realism.

Another actor also suffered from too much of the real thing not long ago in making the picture, but their applause and admiration are sufficient to spur the player on to even greater adventures.

Carrier pigeons are the latest recruits to the United States Army on the border. Atmospheric conditions on the border have rendered both ground and wireless telegraph unreliable and the use of pigeons is to be given a thorough trial.

Billions of Pieces of Mail Handled. The growth of the Post Office Department of the United States is best illustrated by estimates made by department officials of the number of pieces of mail of all kinds handled. The first estimate recorded in 1847-48, 1849, in 1847, no account having been kept since that year from the beginning of the service, in 1878. The latest estimate was that of 1913, when 11,547,446,168 pieces were handled.

United States Senator James E. H. Martin of New Jersey has filed a petition for renomination as the democratic candidate for the office he holds. He requested the secretary of state to print the word "democrat" opposite his name on the election ballot. Another candidate, Frank M. McDermott of Newark, pre-empted the slogan and the request was denied.

Early Recall of Troops Regarded Certain—Carreana Aids Agricultural Development.

In a telegram to the War Department, Gen. Pershing, at Colonia Dublan, reported that Francisco Villa when last heard from was making his way south into Durango with a small following, and that the opinion was general that his prestige was gone and that he never again could become a serious factor in Mexican affairs. Gen. Pershing said that until recently Villa had been shut in the mountains of southern Chihuahua, where he was driven in April by American troops. Supporting as it does Gen. Pershing's report makes it almost certain that the American commissioners will agree promptly to the suggestions of their Mexican conferees for the early recall of the troops.

Duties Are Reduced.

According to dispatches received by Ambassador Arredondo of Mexico, it has been decided by First Chief Carranza, "in order to give agriculture full impetus," to issue a circular making a considerable reduction in duties now levied on certain agricultural implements imported from the United States. It is stated that freight rates over continental railways on such articles would be cut down 50 per cent in order to encourage small farmers to cultivate idle lands. It is reported also that properties intervened by the government are being gradually returned to their rightful owners, as investigation shows that they have taken no part in conspiracies against the administration. Complete security prevails over the Tehuantepec National railway, and large amounts of freight are being hauled from ocean to ocean.

A young actress playing the lead in a thrilling serial recently was required by the script to jump out of a third-story window and lower herself by a rope to a lower window in the next.

In this particular play the heroine was captured by a band of brigands, who tied her cruelly to a tree while they consumed a hearty dinner. Her pet horse, however, which had been left grazing near her, seized the opportunity to chew her bonds apart and release her, first being careful to pick up a revolver in his holster, lying on the ground. Once united, the young woman leaped upon his back, covered the brigands with the revolver, made them return the stolen papers and executed a brilliant exit, followed by the villains. Her pursuers gaining on her, the heroine determined to jump the precipice along which she rode, but here the jockey in girl's clothes was substituted. In order to make the precipice appear steeper than it really was, it had been built out with a temporary structure of scaffolding painted to resemble the real thing. The jockey, who was picked up unconscious, but alive, and with the exception of a few bruises, escaped unscathed. The jockey, thus the moving picture player, except for an occasional trained substitute, plays his parts alone and constantly runs the risk of personal injury. He is a firm believer in the art of the movie himself and is usually willing to take almost any chance in order to make the picture appear more realistic. The movie fans who witness the daring escapades and harrowing escapes of the players often do not realize the actual dangers encountered in making the picture, but their applause and admiration are sufficient to spur the player on to even greater adventures.
